FUND REVIEW

The Fund closed the third quarter on a market value of BWP 2.84 billion from BWP 2.72 billion in Q2-2021. The fund is positioned to defend the current yield and credit quality, looking to preserve and protect the yield of the Fund and opportunistically add yield accretive opportunities that present themselves due to liquidity shortages. Fund duration averaged 4 months during the period.

MARKET OVERVIEW

Year-on-year real GDP bounced back in Q2 2021 recording a growth of 36.0%, this is in comparison to the sharp contraction of 26.0% in the same quarter of 2020. This growth was recorded to be the highest recently and was also expected given the softer base period used in the calculations when economic activity was practically halted. The recovery in the local economy continues to pick up pace with most sectors showing growth. The improvement was evidenced in most sectors with the exception of a few, across the sectors was a clear reflection of the reopening efforts as the economy continues to move gradually out of the COVID-19 restrictions and subsequent relaxation thereof. On a quarter-on-quarter comparison, the domestic economy increased by a marginal 0.2% during the second quarter. Non-mining GDP increased by 20.2% versus a contraction of 16.0% in the same quarter of 2020.

The biggest contributors to GDP were the Public Administration and Defence, Mining and Quarrying, Wholesale and Retail and construction at 18.5%, 14.2%, 11.6% and 11.3% respectively. Diamond production went up by 202.8% attributable to positive price appreciation for the precious stones and increasing rough diamond demand on the back of the global recovery.

Consumer inflation continued its upward trajectory recording another 100-month high of 8.8% in August and then dropping to 8.4% in September 2021, overall inflation averaged 8.7% in Q2 2021. The upward inflationary pressures seen over the past few months have come from an increase in the local fuel prices which had a direct effect on the largest index constituent – Transport. Domestic bonds finished the quarter in negative territory, with a decline of 2.1% as measured by the Fleming Aggregate Bond Index (FABI). Most of the negative returns were explained by government bonds whose yields continued trending upwards. On the shorter end of the curve, money markets also moved to reflect increasing inflation as well as think market liquidity.

OUTLOOK

Despite the low interest rate environment – at least from a policy rate perspective, we evidenced an upward movement in the pricing of money market instruments generally across the industry. This was attributable to liquidity squeezes within the banking sector, these yield accretive opportunities presented themselves and were duly taken advantage of. Our objective is to keep identifying the appropriate entry points for tenor deposits, with adequate compensation for the risks taken. The expectation is that the higher pricing of money market instruments will be carried into early 2022 when we expect them to converge back to normalcy.

Headline inflation is forecast to continue being above the upper bound in the near term and only expected to return into the objective range during the second quarter of 2022 as base effects of the recent increases start to fall off. Ultimately, we expect the Bank of Botswana to remain accommodative given that the recent increase in inflation is only expected to be transitory. We maintain that it will still take the country a period of two to three years to recover the economic output that was lost. The Minister of Finance has revised 2021 growth from 8.8% to a much stronger 9.7% owing to technical reasons after the change of the base year coupled with a stronger than anticipated performance of the mining sector. IMF also revised growth upwards to 9.2%.
